

Washington

Pea harvest was successfully completed on July 13, finishing with A grade product and a pack slightly above expectations. Both our conventional and organic carrot crops are progressing well. Although we experienced some mildew in the organic crop, changes to irrigation and cultural practices have helped minimize its impact.

Michigan

Both the organic and conventional green bean crops are progressing well. The organic fields are full of blossoms and pin beans, while the younger conventional fields are developing nicely. Strong weed management has kept both crops in excellent condition.

Corn

Sweet corn harvest in Washington is off to a great start. Quality has been excellent, and both our conventional and early organic fields have produced slightly above average yields. We are currently approximately 18% complete with our sweet corn acres.

Peppers

Our pepper crop experienced some early season wind damage, but it recovered quickly and is now looking strong as the season progresses.

Green Beans

Weather conditions in Michigan have stabilized despite a dry July. Irrigation and timely rainfall have supported healthy crop development, and we continue to expect budgeted yields with excellent quality.
