

Washington

Corn harvest is approximately 55% complete. Quality has been excellent, although cooler weather and smoke from last month have slowed crop maturity and created mixed maturity in some fields. These conditions have required our field and plant teams to remain flexible as they work to find the right balance between crop readiness and processing.

Michigan

Conventional green bean harvest is underway in Southwest Michigan, with excellent results so far. Despite above average temperatures, high humidity and several days of thunderstorms, our Lake Odessa team kept pace with harvest operations. The forecast ahead looks favorable, and we expect strong quality to continue through the coming week.

Carrots

Carrots continue to progress in Washington. Conventional carrots are sizing well, while the organic crop is running slightly behind. We are still targeting the beginning of October to begin carrot harvest.

Peppers

Green bell pepper harvest is complete and exceeded our planned pack. Red and yellow bell pepper harvest is expected to begin soon, and both crops are looking promising as we head into the next stage of pepper harvest.

Green Beans

Both our conventional and organic green bean crops have delivered excellent quality and yields this season. Organic harvest and processing are complete, with every planted acre harvested. Conventional harvest is now underway, with yields running well above average.
